MDAC leads innovation in improving the health of individuals, communities, and populations through efforts that build and sustain a culture of health.

The development of innovative educational and clinical processes during challenging times such as a pandemic is key to the preparation of nurses for practice in an ever-evolving and complex health care environment. This conference is designed to explore models, interventions, practices and policies that are advancing the preparation of the future nursing workforce and innovation in academic and practice partnerships.

Continuing education credits for nurses will be available.

Learn more about agenda, objectives, learning outcome, abstract submission guidelines, and more on our website.

Registration costs for this year's summit are being subsidized by the Maryland Nursing Workforce Center, a Nurse Support Program II-funded initiative.

The University of Maryland School of Nursing is accredited as a provider of continuing nursing education by the American Nurses Credentialing Center's Commission on Accreditation.
